第一节 应用文写作（满分 15 分）

Dear Chris,

I hope this letter finds you well. I am writing to share with you an enriching and enlightening experience I had at our school's Psychology Club event called "Know Yourself" last week.

The event started with self-assessment questionnaires designed to help me delve into my strengths, weaknesses, and preferences. I then engaged in emotion management training, which equipped me with the skills to recognize, express, and regulate my emotions effectively. I found/find the experience incredibly inspiring, as not only did/does it facilitate my deeper understanding of myself but it also contributed/contributes to better emotional resilience.

Overall, this is a rewarding activity that motivates me to explore my potential/embrace my uniqueness. Have you attended any similar activities recently? Looking forward to your reply.

Yours,
Li Hua

第二节 读后续写（满分 25 分）

Possible version one:

Paragraph 1:

Within minutes, an exact Special#2 was in front of me. The aroma filling the air, the steak was perfectly cooked—two inches thick, tender, juicy, and medium-rare, just as I had described. I couldn't believe Carlos had gone to such lengths/gone the extra mile to ensure I got what I wanted. As I enjoyed my meal, I knew my so-called luck was all about Carlos' dedication to customer satisfaction, which had turned a potentially disappointing morning into a delightful experience. My fatigue faded away, replaced by gratitude and a newfound energy. Between bites, I caught his eye and waved, mouthing a heartfelt "Thank you." He smiled warmly and nodded, his eyes sparkling with satisfaction. It wasn't long before I wolfed down the special. I couldn't help expressing my admiration for Carlos' efforts, declaring that he must be the best restaurant owner in the town. (133 词)

Paragraph 2:

I was about to leave when I learned Carlos had already sold the restaurant. I was taken aback, as Carlos & Annie's had become a favorite spot for me during my stays in San Diego. "Carlos is being Carlos, not being an owner anymore." The waitress remarked, her tone tinged with nostalgia. Her words immediately rooted me there, which made me realize Carlos's actions had nothing to do with profit—they were about hospitality and genuine care. Before I walked out, I extended my sincere gratitude for the best breakfast—and the kindness behind it. He chuckled and replied, "Kindness costs nothing, but it's worth everything." Later that day, as the opening keynoter, before all those professional lines I'd prepared, I briefly shared my Special#2 story at the conference, just to inspire more people to celebrate the simple joys of human connection.
